Graphic artist Jonathan Roth has been fascinated with images of Lincoln’s history all his life. For years, he’s collected vintage photos of our fair city and co-authored books like “When I Was A Kid,” and “Game Day Memories.” Now he’s created some fascinating photo images that let us see what a spot looked like way back when, blended with how it looks today. John Strope, Lincoln native, school administrator, attorney, history buff and longtime Nebraska Historical Museum volunteer has joined forces with Roth to bring you this amazing program. These nostalgic images are sure to inspire stories from your personal memories of Lincoln over the last 60 years. The fact is, that’s exactly the kind of sharing Jon and John want to have happen! Couple all that with Runzas from RUNZA International and you’ve got a trip down “Memory Lane” you won’t want to miss! Mark your calendar and bring your fondest recollections to share with the group!
