comments Re: proposed axe-throwing businesses (with or without alcohol): Are we about to embrace a return to Viking weapons of war touted as family entertainment? Looking for a description of the use of axes online, I find the following: "a brutally effective weapon that well-suited the wild yet powerful style that Vikings were said to utilize when they entered into battle."
If this were not an apparently serious proposal which actually suggests children's birthday parties at these businesses, I would take this as some sort of jesting test of the Lincoln City Council's tolerance for backwards-thinking so-called "entertainment".
An owner says that he and his partners "continually sharpen their process" -- either a word-play joke or a dare to the Council to step up and act responsibly.
If these businesses must be approved, please do not allow children, teens, or alcohol to be part of them under any circumstances.
Thank you.

comments Dear Council members:

The world's biggest investors say get moving to address climate change or face a market crash.
